4/13/2018 — Service members participated in the annual Sexual Assault Prevention and Response Field meet April 13 aboard Camp Foster.

Teams from each branch competed in the field meet to raise awareness during Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention month.

"The most important thing is what we represented today," said Marine Corps Sgt. Rashid Price, a competitor on the Marine team. "Brig. Gen. Rock come out here to remind us what we are here for. It was a great competition, but all in all we knew that we came here for, sexual assault prevention and awareness."

While raising awareness, the meet also tested the mental and physical limitations of the Marines, sailors, airmen and soldiers through friendly competition. Each branch competed in the following four events: the tire flip, four man relay, tug-of-war, and drunken egg contest.

"This built cohesion and continues readiness," said Army Lt. Col. Eldred Ramtahal, the commanding officer of 835th Transportation Battalion. "I think it is phenomenal that we do events like this to continue to highlight and bring awareness. We will work to eliminate this, and those who don't believe that do not know the strength and the willpower of the (Department of Defense). Prevention starts with each of us, and we will work endlessly every day to prevent sexual assault."

18th FSS brings innovative ID process to Kadena

By Staff Sgt. Micaiah Anthony

18th Wing Public Affairs

4/15/2018 — Whether it's giving up after searching for hours and destroying the house, lost wallets, stolen purses, or even just simply dealing with an upcoming expiration date—renewing or acquiring a new dependent identification card for some may seem to be a daunting task.

To alleviate hassles associated with ID card renewal, the 18th Force Support Squadron Military Personnel Section at Kadena Air Base, implemented a new process effective April 1, for dependents.

Customers can now obtain and complete the required forms from home. All that is needed is their sponsor's signature, a photo that meets the dependent ID card requirements and two forms of identification for dependents over 18 and one form of identification for individuals under 18.

"Once the sponsor signs, all the documents can be forwarded over to our org box through a secure site that sends the information encrypted," said Tech. Sgt. Kimberly Evans, 18th FSS NCOIC of customer support. "They can send it via their cell phone or personal email, either way, they don't have to worry about personally identifiable information breaches."

After the documents have been received by the customer service section, the requestor will receive a confirmation email.

"Once the customer submits the required information it will take 7-10 duty days to process," said Airman 1st Class Leann Munoz, 18th FSS customer service technician. "After the customer receives the notification email, they can pick it up Monday through Friday from 1300 until 1500."

The change was implemented to save customers time and enable technicians to accomplish other duties and tasks.

"When dependent ID card customers come in here they can wait anywhere from 30 minutes to four hours but this cuts the waiting time down to 15 minutes for them," said Munoz. "It gives us more time to take care of other tasks such as making common access cards, updating systems and adding dependents to military members' records."

To register for a new dependent ID card go to www.kadenafss.com/career/military-personnel-section/ and select 'identification cards' to view the instructions and download the documents needed.

4/12/2018 — Team Kadena honored fallen American and Filipino servicemen killed during the Bataan Death March with the 5th annual Bataan Memorial Death March, held April 7, at Kadena Air Base.

The memorial march is held to give participants an idea what servicemembers dealt with during the original Bataan

Death March.

The Bataan Death March became a crucial turning point in World War II and the Pacific theater due to public outcry about treatment of the captured servicemembers – considered prisoners of war.

As a strategic location, the Philippines were targeted by the Japanese army, thus leading to an invasion – just hours after the attack at Pearl Harbor – to eliminate the American presence in the region. Due to the invasion, American and Filipino soldiers were forced to retreat to the Bataan Peninsula. After holding out for approximately 3 months without naval or air support, the soldiers surrendered.

Once they surrendered, the soldiers were forced to endure a 65-mile march – known now as the Bataan Death March – to San Fernando before being shipped to prison camps, which led to many fatalities from starvation, injuries, and poor treatment by their captors.

Even though the event occurred nearly 80 years ago, the importance has not been lost over time. The annual event sponsored by Kadena's Top 3 involved participants marching, running, or walking 8.5 miles around the flightline and through part of the base at Kadena.

While the length of the event is roughly 1/8th of the original march, many participants were able to immerse themselves on a basic level of what it must have been like by carrying full ruck gear and flags to honor the fallen.

Over 200 individuals participated in this year's event – including servicemembers, civilian employees, and family members. By holding events such as this, members of Team Kadena are able to remember the past and look toward the future with lessons learned from our history in the Pacific.

F-35 completes most comprehensive flight test program in aviation history

By F-35 Joint Program Office Public Affairs

4/13/2018 - EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — The F-35 program has accomplished the final developmental test flight of the System Development and Demonstration phase of the program.

The F-35 Integrated Test Force is based at Edwards Air Force Base, California, and Naval Air Station Patuxent River, Maryland.

“Completing F-35 SDD flight test is the culmination of years of hard work and dedication from the joint government and industry team,” said Vice Adm. Mat Winter, F-35 Program executive officer. “Since the first flight of AA-1 in 2006, the developmental flight test program has operated for more than 11 years mishap-free, conducting more than 9,200 sorties, accumulating over 17,000 flight hours, and executing more than 65,000 test points to verify the design, durability, software, sensors, weapons capability and performance for all three F-35 variants. Congratulations to our F-35 test team and the broader F-35 enterprise for delivering this new powerful and decisive capability to the warfighter.”

The final SDD flight occurred April 11, 2018 at Naval Air Station Patuxent River, Maryland, when Navy test aircraft CF-2 completed a mission to collect loads data while carrying external 2,000-pound GBU-31 Joint Direct Attack Munitions and AIM-9X Sidewinder heat-seeking missiles.

From flight sciences to mission systems testing, the critical work completed by F-35 test teams cleared the way for the Block 3F capability to be delivered to the operational warfighter. More than a thousand SDD flight test engineers, maintainers, pilots and support personnel took the three variants of the F-35 to their full flight envelope to test aircraft performance and flying qualities. The test team conducted 6 at-sea detachments and performed more than 1,500 vertical landing tests on the F-35B variant. The developmental flight test team completed 183 Weapon Separation Tests; 46 Weapons Delivery Accuracy tests; 33 Mission Effectiveness tests, which included numerous multi-ship missions of up to eight F-35s against advanced threats.

“The F-35 flight test program represents the most comprehensive, rigorous and the safest developmental flight test program in aviation history,” said Greg Ulmer, Lockheed Martin’s vice president and general manager of the F-35 program. “The joint government and industry team demonstrated exceptional collaboration and expertise, and the results have given the men and women who fly the F-35 great confidence in its transformational capability.”

Developmental flight test is a key component of the F-35 program’s SDD phase, which will formally be completed following an Operational Test and Evaluation and a Defense Department decision to go into full-rate aircraft production.

While SDD required flight test is now complete, F-35 flight testing continues in support of phased capability improvements and modernization of the F-35 air system. This effort is part of the Joint Program Office’s Continuous Capability Development and Delivery framework, which will provide timely, affordable incremental warfighting capability improvements to maintain joint air dominance against evolving threats to the U. S. and its allies.

With stealth technology, advanced sensors, weapons capacity and range, the F-35 is the most lethal, survivable and connected fighter aircraft ever built. More than a fighter jet, the F-35’s ability to collect, analyze and share data is a powerful force multiplier that enhances all airborne, surface and ground-based assets in the battlespace and enables men and women in uniform to execute their mission and return home safe.

Army scientists uncover how to stop cyber intrusions

By ARL Public Affairs

4/16/2018 - RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — U.S. Army-funded researchers at the University of California in Los Angeles have found a proverbial smoking gun signature of the long sought-after Majorana particle, and the find, they say, could block intruders on sensitive communication networks.

The Majorana particles, which were predicted more than 80 years ago by Italian theoretical physicist Ettore Majorana, could become critical building blocks for quantum computers because their unusual properties make them resistant to external interference and prevent loss of quantum information.

The discovery not only solves a long standing problem in physics, but also opens up a potential avenue to control Majorana fermions for realizing robust topological quantum computing, said Dr. Joe Qiu, manager of the Solid-State Electronics Program within the Engineering Sciences Directorate at the Army Research Office, an element of the U.S. Army Research Laboratory, located at Research Triangle Park in Durham, North Carolina.

Quantum computers could solve problems much more quickly and efficiently than classical computers, potentially leading to significant improvement in situational awareness with the capability to process large amount of available data, a fundamental priority research area for the U.S. Army.

“Prior experimental approaches based on semiconductor nanowires on superconductors have produced inconclusive signals which could also be attributed to other effects,” Qiu said. “The UCLA experiment using stacked layers of magnetic topological insulator and superconductor has demonstrated the clearest and most unambiguous evidence of the particles as predicted by theory so far.”

The research leading to the discovery represents a close interdisciplinary collaboration between a team of researchers including electrical engineers, physicists and material scientists. The UCLA team is funded by an Army Multidisciplinary University Research Initiative, or MURI, award jointly managed by Electronics (Dr. Joe Qiu), Physics (Dr. Marc Ulrich) and Materials (Dr. John Prater) Divisions at ARO. ARO funds research to initiate scientific and far-reaching technological discoveries in extramural organizations, educational institutions, nonprofit organizations and private industry that may make future American Soldiers stronger and safer.

This research was led by Prof. Kang Wang, a UCLA distinguished professor of electrical engineering, of physics and of materials science and engineering, who also holds UCLA’s Raytheon Chair in Electrical Engineering.

First published in the prestigious journal Science last July, the research was featured in an invited talk presented by Professor Wang as well as two other related invited talks by his collaborators during the American Physical Society March Meeting.

“Because the Majorana particle is its own anti-particle – carrying zero electrical charge – it is viewed as the best candidate to carry a quantum bit, or qubit, the unit of data that would be the foundation of quantum computers. Unlike ‘bits’ of data in standard computers, which can be represented as either 0s or 1s, qubits have the ability to be both 0s and 1s, a property that would give quantum computers exponentially more computing power and speed than today’s best supercomputers,” Qiu said.

The Majorana particle has been the focus of keen interest for quantum computing in large part because its neutral charge makes it resistant to external interference and gives it the ability to leverage and sustain a quantum property known as entanglement. Entanglement allows two physically separate particles to concurrently encode information, which could generate enormous computing power.

“Imagine that bits of data in standard computers are like cars traveling both ways on two-lane highways,” said Wang, who also is director of the King Abdulaziz City for Science and Technology’s Center of Excellence in Green Nanotechnology. “A quantum computer could have many lanes and many levels of ‘traffic,’ and the cars could hop between levels and travel in both directions at the same time, in every lane and on every level. We need stable, armored quantum ‘cars’ to do this and the Majorana particles are those supercars.”

For their research, the team set up a superconductor, a material that allows electrons to flow freely across its surfaces without resistance, and placed above it a thin film of a new quantum material called topological insulator, to give the engineers the ability to manipulate the particles into a specific pattern. After sweeping a very small magnetic field over the setup, the researchers found the Majorana particles’ distinct quantized signal – the telltale fingerprint of a specific type of quantum particles – in the electrical traffic between the two materials.

“The Majorana particles show up and behave like halves of an electron, although they aren’t pieces of electrons,” said Qing Lin He, a UCLA postdoctoral scholar and co-lead author of the Science paper. “We observed quantum behavior, and the signal we saw clearly showed the existence of these particles.”

In the experiment, Majorana particles traveled along the topological insulator’s edges in a distinct braid-like pattern. The researchers said the next step in their research will explore how to use Majorana particles in quantum braiding, which would knit them together to allow information to be stored and processed at super high speeds.

Lei Pan, a UCLA doctoral student in electrical engineering and the paper’s co-lead author, said Majorana particles’ unique properties would appear to make them especially useful for topological quantum computers.

“While conventional quantum systems have sophisticated schemes to correct errors, information encoded in a topological quantum computer cannot be easily corrupted,” he said. “What’s exciting about using Majorana particles to build quantum computers is that the system would be fault-tolerant.”

The research team also includes collaborating members from UC Irvine, UC Davis and Stanford University.

By Lt. Clyde Shavers, Commander

Task Force 73 Destroyer Squadron 7 Public Affairs 4/13/2018 - PELELIU, Palau — The U.S. Navy and Marine Corps and Japanese Self-Defense Force held a wreath-laying ceremony at the Peleliu Peace Memorial Park to remember the service members who lost their lives at the Battle of Peleliu, April 12.

Considered the bitterest battle of World War II for U.S. Marines, the first U.S. invasion force landed in Peleliu, Sept. 15, 1944. Expected to last only four days, the Battle of Peleliu stretched more than two months with a casualty rate exceeding that of all other amphibious operations during the Pacific War, and resulted in more than 10,800 deaths.

The ceremony included remarks from Gunnery Sgt. Walter Greber, staff noncommissioned officer in charge for security, and Lt. Cmdr. Satoshi Hirokami, Japanese Maritime Self-Defense Force in joint staff, and a joint wreath-laying at the concrete cenotaph erected to memorialize all those who perished on Peleliu in World War II. The ceremony concluded with the playing of "Taps" by two buglers to honor the sacrifice made by those who fought in the battle.

"While the Battle of Peleliu gave us insight into emerging Japanese defense tactics, these lessons could not have been learned without the sacrifice and service of our U.S. troops," said Greber. "The battle underscores our warfighting history, determination and will, as well as the resolve of the Japanese."

U.S. Marines of the 1st Marine Division and later Soldiers of the U.S. Army's 81st Infantry Division fought to capture an airstrip, encountering a well-armed Japanese force defending 500 caves that honeycombed the small coral island, a maze the Marines soon nicknamed 'Bloody Nose Ridge.'

"Today, times have changed and the relationship between Japan and the United States have become stronger than ever as can be seen in this event," said Hirokami. "We together mourn the soldiers who lost their lives here."

Following the ceremony, U.S. and Japanese participants visited the Peleliu Elementary School and played sports and listened to a band performance by the U.S. Navy Pacific Fleet Band with more than 50 students, while the medical staff conducted health screenings at the Peleliu clinic providing blood-glucose, vital signs and height-weight measurements as well as prescription eyeglasses.

"We have witnesses today who came from ... the Republic of Palau and the United Kingdom," said Hirokami. "[This] shows the special relationship among us.

It is my sincere hope that our visit here contributes to the further development of our cooperative relations."

The U.S. Sailors and Marines and Japanese Self-Defense Force staff members came to the Republic of Palau aboard expeditionary fast transport USNS Brunswick (T-EPF 6) as part of Pacific Partnership 2018, the largest annual multilateral humanitarian assistance and disaster relief preparedness mission.

"Our history is important to us," said Greber. "It keeps the memory of the sacrifices of our former brothers and sisters made remembered. It also allows us to learn from past mistakes and continue to evolve."

How to File a Complaint with IG

If you believe you are unable to resolve your complaint through supervisory channels, you may seek IG assistance to determine if the complaint should be filed with the IG. You can file a complaint if you reasonably believe inappropriate conduct has occurred or a violation of law, policy, procedures, or regulation has been committed. Complete the personnel data information on an AF Form 102 and briefly outline the facts and relevant information related to the issue or complaint. List the allegations of wrongdoing briefly, in general terms and provide supporting narrative detail and documents later, when interviewed by an IG person. Allegations should be written as bullets and should answer who committed the violation; what violation was committed; what law, regulation, procedures, or policy was violated; when did the violation occur. Help is available: Call your Kadena IG office at 634-7622 for Maj. Sarabia or 634-1109 for Mr. Lovingood, or leave a message on the Kadena Fraud Waste & Abuse (FWA) Hotline at 634-0404.

18th MDG Clinic Closures

The Kadena Air Base clinic will be closed on May 17 (MDG ½ Training Day). Closed at 12 p.m. The 18th Medical Group is responsible for ensuring the 18th Wing's medical readiness in support of the United States' and Japan's mutual interests. In keeping with this mission, the Kadena Clinic will be participating in 18th Wing upcoming exercises. During exercises, our normal patient care and clinical services (pharmacy, lab, immunizations, etc.) will be impacted, as the clinic may be closed for one day during these exercises (exact dates subject to scenario). We ask for your patience as our trusted professionals exercise their skills and work with the Wing and other agencies on island in support of these training events. We apologize for any inconvenience that this may cause. As always, in the event of an emergency, seek emergency services at the U.S. Naval Hospital on Camp Foster, or by dialing ambulance services at 634-1796 or by cell phone 098-934-5911. For more information, contact Capt. Jennifer Stark at 630-4565, Staff Sgt. Larissa Palmer at 630-4504, or Ms. Melissa Cook at 630-5050.

18th Wing Equal Opportunity

Do you face concerns of unlawful discrimination or sexual harassment? If so, Kadena Air Base leadership maintains a strict "zero-tolerance" policy pertaining to discriminatory behavior. If you feel you are being unlawfully discriminated against, to include sexual harassment, take action. We encourage members to use the chain of command first to resolve issues at the lowest level. However, you can also contact the EO office at 634-2571 to set up an appointment; or you may visit our office. Please note that the EO office will not accept a Formal Complaint more than 60 calendar days for military and 45 calendar days for civilian complaints after the alleged offense occurred without sufficient justification.

SUGAR CANE: OKINAWA'S FAMOUS PRODUCE

In comparison to long ago, the number of sugar cane farms has gone down, but if you rent a car and go out to the suburbs, you will definitely be able to find some fields. In a breeze, the sugarcane will murmur softly, but in a strong wind like a typhoon, this becomes much louder. If the field is close to the sea,

If we say 'a noise that sounds Okinawan', what do you think of? The notes of a shamisen? The drums and shouts of an eisa dance? Waves crashing on the beach? Or even the sound of whistles made through one's fingers? These are all typical Okinawan sounds, but the one sound that visitors must hear while on their travels is the sound of the sugar cane leaves swaying in the wind.

you might be able to hear these sounds together with the waves. Known as 'uujii' in Okinawan dialect, sugarcane is the largest cultivated crop within the region. As it gets colder, growth slows down and sugar content in the stem increases. This means that the harvest season is from December to April. When the plant flowers, this is a sign that it is ready for harvesting.
